SAGINAW MEN VISIT MERCHANTS

150 ENJOY BANQUET AND HEAR INSPIRING TALKS

Saginaw pledged itself to the assistance of Grayling when the two cities clasped the hands of fellowship here Wednesday evening at a dinner meeting at Shoppensons Inn, where 45 Saginaw business men entertained about 100 retailers of Grayling and vicinity. The meeting represented the completion of the second home-ward lap of the 500-mile good-will tour the Saginawans are making in Northeastern Michigan under the wholesale merchants of the board of commerce.

"I think I can safely bring to you the assistance of our board of directors," said Charles W. Haensel, president of the Saginaw Board of Commerce, "if you prove to us you are awake to your opportunities. We will always extend our well wishes and any material aid within our power."

In the concluding address of the evening, Mr. Haensel advised the local group that the future prosperity of their community rests with them and suggested methods of forging ahead to success.

Last of three dinner meetings of the trip at Alpena, Cheboygan and Grayling, the session was, the visitors claimed, the most enthusiastic of all and proved the traveling wholesalers' effort toward tightening the bonds of friendship to the north is growing daily. Besides Mr. Haensel, the speakers were: Vincent J. Byerlein, president of the wholesale bureau; Marius Hanson, Grayling banker; J. George O'Brien, general manager of the Automobile club of Northern Michigan; Thomas Marston of Bay City; Rev. John W. Greenwood, pastor of the Michelson Memorial church, Grayling, and W. W. Lewis, president of the Grayling Board of Trade.

"Profits come from thoughts in business in every walk of life," Mr. Haensel told the local retailers. "When you pool your brains and show unity of effort bred in confidence in your fellowmen, you will be on the quickest road to prosperity. Group effort is the thing we all need to better our positions in the business life of the nation."

The valley city commercial executive said old ideas in retailing are passing and listed accessories to success, such as advertising, window display, and other technical matters pertaining to the retail trade.

In a casual comment upon chain store competition he assured his audience that the cost of operating the chains is quite as great, if not in excess of the cost of operating the individual establishments. In many districts it is known to be seven percent higher, he said, due to greater rental, maintenance of general offices and a larger pay roll.

"You people here in Grayling have more brain power than any chain store system in the United States," he continued, "and I urge you to sit down and study your problems together. Think of the advantages you have over outside competitors. Recall that the profits you make do not go to New York or Chicago or some other center but go toward building your city and beautifying it. Your profits—Grayling mothers are interested in this—go toward educating your children and not the children of persons unknown to you."

Mr. Byerlein, who as president of the bureau, presided at the meeting, welcomed the Grayling men around the dinner table with their down-state firms, relating the hard efforts of Saginaw to attain the position the city now holds in the business world. He also regretted the forced absence, due to illness, of Rasmus Hanson, donor of the 1800-acre reservation now used by the Michigan National Guard near here.

Marius Hanson, nephew of Rasmus Hanson, said his dealings with Saginaw men always entailed pleasure, and pointed out that the presence of the junketeers proved Saginaw as interested in its upstate neighbors. He said, in reference to lumbering, that Saginaw had stripped this section of one of its greatest resources but that this vicinity might soon be a competitor of Saginaw in the oil operations.

Mr. O'Brien, the versatile member of the Saginaw party who has been acting as humorist, was equally funny as in previous talks and in addition he provided new jokes to "relieve the suffering of the boys who are forced to listen to me twice a day."

"Michigan is the playground of the nation, and we men of Bay City and Saginaw are alert to help in advertising the state as such," said Mr. Marston, who is an official of the Northeastern Michigan Tourist Association. He also lauded Saginaw's interest in the north country as shown by the trip and said his presence among the Saginaw men proved they held no brief for persons from neighboring cities who also are interested in the wolverine northlands.

"You glad to see this token of good-will and fraternity between the two cities," said Rev. Greenwood, who was a sergeant in the Canadian army during the World War. "One of the greatest weaknesses confronting the country is its lack of cooperation, but I believe we folks of Michigan are striving to overcome this hindrance to progress."

Mr. Lewis, in official capacity as president of Grayling Board of Trade, said the latching of Grayling was always out to Saginaw residents and added that in his estimation, Saginaw has not only lost none of its old-time alertness, but is attaining even greater laurels in this respect. He applauded the forcefulness of the younger men as expressed in the rousing community singing, which preceded the meeting under the leadership of William A. Rorke, secretary of the bureau, and chieftain of the junket expedition.

John Pennycook, a member of the party, pleased with two solos for which accompaniment was played by Allan Leehr, whose orchestra furnished the dinner music. Art Parrish and Art Freimuth, members of the orchestra, entertained with character songs and the individual players appeared in instrumental solos.

Mr. Smith's talk was the shortest of the evening. He sincerely welcomed the visitors and briefly outlined the Grayling school system activities. After the meeting the wholesalers were welcomed at the Board of Trade club rooms and were invited to use the Grayling golf course Thursday morning before departure. Several played on the new link at Gaylord Wednesday afternoon and welcomed the chance to even score.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT FREDERIC A SUCCESS

Commencement, the most interesting event of the season, was introduced by Rev. Young of Gaylord, who gave the Baccalaureate address. The sermon was especially good and replete with most excellent advice for young people. Mr. Young emphasized the class motto: "The elevator to success is not running; take the stairs," and impressed deeply upon the minds of the class the truth of the statement.

This was the first time in the history of the school that Class night exercises had been observed and an unusual large audience turned out to listen, not only to this, but to the Commencement program.

We are only doing justice to those who took part on the programs when we say that each one delivered his or her part exceptionally well and earned the hearty applause of the audience. The Etude, by Chopin, piano, rendered by Miss Anna May Lewis, and the solo, "A Birthday," by Miss Marie Schmidt, received enthusiastic applause and they were recipients of many favorable comments. Several who were especially well qualified to judge marveled that one so young as Miss Schmidt should have such a mellifluous voice.

The Lincoln mousart was presented to Miss Doris Cosant by Prof. F. E. Robinson, head of the commercial department at Mount Pleasant.

The Commencement address to the class was also given by Prof. Robinson. He took as his subject, "Live Wires," and gave one of the most interesting and helpful addresses to which the people of Fredric have ever listened. This is the fourth time that Mr. Robinson has been invited to our town and his advice is always most inspiring and helpful. The diplomas were granted to the class in a most fitting manner by Secretary C. S. Barber, and thus ended our educational work for another year.

Eighth Grade Diplomas Presented
A special part of the Commencement program in Fredric was the presentation of Eighth grade diplomas to the students of Maple Forest and Fredric townships. The diplomas were presented by R. D. Bailey, County Agricultural Agent of Crawford County.

Mr. Bailey advised this class of young people not to become quitters and urged them to continue to work hard for a higher education that would best fit them to serve humanity. The class seemed very much interested and judging from the expression on their faces, they will follow his advice.

WATERWORKS QUESTION WINS

CARRIES BY VOTE OF 206 TO 29

The special election held last Monday for the purpose of determining whether or not the village should purchase the waterworks system of Salling Hanson Company carried by a vote of 206 to 29. This will give the village council the authority to go ahead and buy the plant according to the terms specified in their proposal to the company.

The village is to pay Salling Hanson Company the sum of $5,000 for the present system including all pipe lines, the pumping equipment, building and land sufficient for wells and standpipe. While the election carried by a good majority, still there was some opposition for one reason or another. It seems that this proposal was the best that has ever been submitted to the property owners of the city, according to the opinion of some of those who have given the matter considerable study and thought. The council had carefully figured out the project and it was their unanimous belief that this plan was the best. It required a two-third majority to pass, or 157 votes, thus giving a majority of 49 votes.

The Council met Monday night, at which time the village clerk was directed to write the owners that they were ready to go ahead and complete the transaction. Just as soon as this is done the village will proceed to procure electric power for operation and make other necessary changes. The present plan is to reconstruct some of the present pipe lines just as fast as finances will enable them to do so, without having to bond the village in order to raise the money. The Council feels that enough money can be raised by taxation each year to take care of the improvements. The usual outcome in cases where bonds are issued is that the community has to pay out as much for interest as it does for the principal. As a measure of economy to the taxpayer the Council appears to have acted wisely, and we believe that in the near future too, that we will have a waterworks system that is going to be all that anyone could hope for.

A Thought for The Week
"I did not know that children of their age
Could feel so deeply. When they laugh, they laugh
So like the sunlight, so like running water."
I did not know that when they wept their work
Could tap the same cold, deep, eternal springs
That feed our older grief.
I grope in darkness. Youth bewilders me."
—From Heart of Youth.

In the light of the thought of this poem, let us show fine discrimination in facing the problem of youth. Woodrow Wilson used to say, "It is just as hard to do your duty when men are sneering at you as when they are shooting at you." Youth needs our sympathetic understanding more and our criticism less.

FLAG DAY CELEBRATIONS
Hundreds of American communities have responded to the suggestion that the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the adoption of the American flag by the Continental Congress be observed with special exercises on June 14th.
These celebrations will take many forms—school exercises, parades of school children, civic and military organizations, sunrise, afternoon and evening exercises, and general display of the flag from homes and business houses.
The National Republic has printed and distributed several thousand copies of a pamphlet making suggestions for the organization and conduct of such celebrations.
In no community in the land should June 14th pass without some appropriate recognition of this day. There is definite patriotic value in public demonstrations of this kind at a time when all that the American flag stands for is being assailed from so many quarters.

STOP THIS PRACTICE
The business district is considered legitimate prey for any scheme which any one may have thought out as a source of profit. An individual who wants to promote something of doubtful value for selfish gain or a group that wants to buy beads for the Indians or sunbonnets for the Eskimos, descends on the business district and proceeds to harvest the dollars thereof. Some schemes are worthy of support, while others are undeserving and valueless. It would be well if business men would get together and select a committee to investigate proposed schemes and pass on their merits, giving approval if they are deserving and withholding endorsement if they are worthless or undeserving. This method would give support where it is deserved and save time devoted to consideration which is necessarily hasty and often faulty. Thus, when anyone has a scheme with which he hopes to enrich himself or endow a great cause, he could present his reasoning to a committee with the time and courage to listen and analyze, and then results could be passed on to the individuals in the business group.—Wayne (Nebraska) Herald.

FORMER RESIDENT BROUGHT HERE FOR BURIAL
The remains of Joseph Morency, a former resident of Grayling, were brought here Monday and taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Vallad. Services were held the following morning at St. Mary's church, Rev. Fr. Culligan officiating.

Mr. Morency passed away at his home in Detroit on June 4th, after being ill since January, part of the time being confined in a Detroit hospital. About a year ago the family moved to Detroit, after having resided in Grayling for 12 years. Previous to that time they had lived in Maple Forest township for 25 years, so that the family was well and favorably known in this county. Most of their children were educated in our schools, but after growing to manhood and womanhood most of them left Grayling and have since married.

The deceased is survived by his wife, two sons and five daughters, Alfred and Leo Morency, Mrs. Charles Ames, Mrs. Frank Bracken, Mrs. Thomas Craig, all of Detroit, Mrs. Howard Smith and Mrs. Robert Churchill of Pontiac.

All of the above, together with their wives and husbands and families, came to be in attendance at the funeral, all returning home Tuesday, excepting Mrs. Joseph Morency and sons, Alfred and Leo, who remained until Wednesday.

TATTLINGS

Folks: Says I to myself, well, to-day is the day I get a real vacation. I'll tune up the car and I'll take all my gang and I'll let all the worry and such things go hang.

'Course the kids and the wife are all glad to agree, so they pile in the bus in a hurry, and gee, the thought of a trip in the out-of-doors bright is the sort of an outing that just hits me right.

We ramble along on a wonderful street and I'm dodgin' the millions of autos we meet. The traffic is wild and it shortly appears that the buzzing and honking will deafen my ears.

We seek for a roadway where traffic is tame, but, shucks, all the other folks are doing the same thing. The highway? Fate laughs in my face, and I find, like all drivers, there is no such place.

We finally get home and I smile when I think how the plans for a rest-up have gone on the blink. My nerves are on edge and my eyesight is spent. I'm blamed more tired than I was when I went.

My mother thinks that father ought to always have the best, and she has got him so he thinks he's better'n all the rest. She gets his evening paper out when he comes home at night, and drags around his books and tries to use him right.

And when we all sit down to eat she never blinks a lash. But hands him out some chicken and helps us kids to hash.

My mother says that home should be in our affections first, but father thinks it's just the place for him to joke and laughs and does a good kind, but when he starts for home at night he leaves his smiles behind. He snarls about the dinner, and he calls the victuals trash, so mother feeds him chicken and fills us up on hash.

But after father's rested and has his evening smoke, he always feels better and he likes to play and joke. Well, he has us with our lessons, and he does it in a way that makes them entertaining and seems just as plain as day. And sometimes, when we go to bed, he hands us out some cash. So let him have his chicken, we'll get along with hash.

You won't find many of the young people these days who are shy, but you will find plenty who are shy among those who foot the young people's bills.

The only reason flappers don't powder their noses more often on the streets is because the mirrors on the sidewalk scales and gum vending machines are not closer together.

Hen Peck went up to Judge Howell's office last Saturday and says to him, "I'd like to have you get a divorce for me, judge," says he. "What is your grounds?" the judge says. "Well," says Hen, "I've been a livin' with Sarah, now for going on fourteen years," he says, "but I ain't really entitled to a rest!" says he.

The professor was asked to give his definition of a woman. After clearing his throat he began in his leisurely way, "Woman is, generally speaking, 'Stop right there, professor,' interrupted a lowbrow. 'If you talked a thousand years you'd never get any nearer to it than that.'"

Little Bill Braggart and Tony Leggo were going by yesterday whilst I were in the front yard a-raking up the leaves. I heard Tony say, "Turbidious howl!" My sister, a-going to get married," says he. "Huh! Bill says, 'that's nothing,' says he. 'My sister's a-going to get divorced,' he says."

It is about time for the bathing beauty to appear, but after all she won't have much on the flapper with rolled stockings and skirt at half mast.

MRS. MARY GOUDROW PASSED AWAY AT DURAND

Mrs. Mary Goudrow, wife of the late John O. Goudrow, former well-known shoe dealer of Grayling, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. J. Collins at Durand, Sunday morning. Mrs. Goudrow had been ailing for a long time, but had only been confined to her bed about a month when the end came. Some time ago she suffered a broken arm, which caused her a lot of pain and discomfort and tended to make her more feeble.

Mrs. Goudrow before her marriage was Miss Mary Ellen Sheridan. She was born in Toronto and was about 93 years old at the time of her death. In 1890 she was united in marriage to Mr. Goudrow at Otsego Lake, where he was conducting a shoe store, this place at that time being a thriving lumbering town. In 1893 the family moved to Grayling, and following the burning of their shoe business and home on Cedar street in 1902, they purchased the property on the corner of Michigan and Peninsular avenues, where Mr. Goudrow operated a shoe store and the family lived until Mr. Goudrow's death on May 6, 1924. At that time Mrs. Goudrow went to make her home with her daughter, Mrs. Collins, and also spent some time in Detroit with the Scott Loader family.

Mrs. Goudrow led a most exemplary life; she was most devoted to the Catholic faith and when young was most active in the affairs of St. Mary's church of which she was a member, also being a member of the Altar society for years. She never complained and was ever ready to lend a helping hand in time of need. Mrs. Goudrow had many old friends in Grayling, who were grieved to learn of her demise.

The remains were brought to Grayling Tuesday and the funeral held Wednesday morning from St. Mary's church. A requiem high mass was solemnized by Rev. Fr. J. L. Culligan, the church choir rendering the mass hymns. Interment was in Elmwood cemetery beside the remains of her husband.

Surviving the deceased are one daughter, Mrs. Della Collins and five grandchildren, all of Durand. Mrs. Goudrow was grandmother of John and Bernard Conklin, who make their home with their aunt, Mrs. Collins, since the death of their mother, Mrs. Josephine Conklin, in April, 1925. Also six step-children survive, Mrs. W. A. Senay of Linwood, Capt. Frank Goudrow, Mrs. Scott Loader, Mrs. Goudrow, Detroit; Mrs. George Tobin, Bay City, and Mrs. Mary Theis, New York.

Those accompanying the remains here were Mr. and Mrs. Collins and daughter Violet of Durand, Mrs. Scott Loader and Mrs. Frank Goudrow, Detroit; Mrs. W. A. Senay, Linwood.

SELWOOD OF SLEEPY CAT
by FRANK H. SPEARMAN
COPYRIGHT BY CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS
W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—At Sleepy Cat Doctor Carpy tells Wentworth, freighting boss, of a shooting scrape in Bartoo's gambling den, in which John Selwood, gambler, in defense of his wounded partner, Dave Tracy, shows remarkable skill and nerve.

CHAPTER II.—A year afterward, Selwood, now Wentworth's representative at Sleepy Cat, driving back to board, comes upon a settler whose wagon has mired in a creek. He helps get the outfit clear, after picking up the supposed owner thereof in Fyler's (the settler's) wagon. Alvin Selwood, a youth, is robbed of $500 in a Sleepy Cat gambling den. His mother tells McAlpin, Selwood's aunt.

CHAPTER III.—McAlpin, himself powerless, informs Selwood of the robbery, and Selwood forces the swindlers, Bartoo and Atkins, to return the money.

CHAPTER IV.—Starbuck, head of the crooked gamblers, remonstrates with Selwood and is sharply rebuffed. Fyler boards a dry goods store, with "Big Haynes" running a mock auction of worthless goods in the place. Fyler, young McAlpin's uncle, is engaged by Selwood as a freighter. Dave Tracy slowly recovering from his wounds, is looked after by Margaret Hyde, woman of mystery, housekeeper at Doctor Carpy's hotel. Selwood learns the girl whose shoe he picked up is Christie, Fyler's daughter.

CHAPTER V.—Selwood makes Christie's acquaintance and learns that Atkins is a crook. The storekeeper refuses to believe it. Starbuck, attracted, tries to ingratiate himself with Christie. The girl's mind is poisoned against Selwood.

CHAPTER VI.—Fyler is beaten and robbed. Christie, seeking Doctor Carpy, tells Selwood and informs him that Atkins has thrown her father out of his store, claiming to own it. Fyler is not badly hurt. Her father has lost money gambling, and Christie, to his dismay, tells Selwood she hates all gamblers. Selwood advertises for information of an old missionary padre, whose picture he displays with Paradise and Bob Scott, Indian in Selwood's employ, the latter makes preparations to dislodge Atkins from Fyler's store.

CHAPTER VII.—Christie warns Selwood of threats made by Starbuck, also that he had asked her to marry him. Selwood rages. With his two companions, Selwood drives Atkins and Haynes, from Fyler's store.

CHAPTER VIII.—Starbuck tells Christie Selwood is a gambler, and on her questioning him he admits it, but declares he is "square" while Starbuck and his crowd are "cheats." The girl is not satisfied with his explanation.

CHAPTER IX.—Following a poker game with General Roper Selwood discloses the fact that the old soldier is his grandfather. Selwood declares Roper, then forer commander, made Selwood's birth, sent his son, Lieut. Harry Roper, Selwood's father, to death at the hands of Indians, and refused to acknowledge a marriage had taken place, disowning his boy's children.

CHAPTER X.—Carpy warns Selwood the vigilantes intend to clean up the town. Selwood, known as a square gambler, is not moved, but the vigilantes are after Starbuck and his gang of crooks. Selwood refuses to take part in the clean up. Fearing for Tracy's safety in the coming mixup, he tries in vain to induce the derry old veteran to seek safety.

CHAPTER XI.—Selwood drugs Tracy and, with Paradise and Scott, gets him across the river safely. Returning alone, he finds the vigilantes at work and Christie missing. Acting on a revelation he had made to quit the career of a gambler, Selwood deliberately burns his place of business and returns to Tracy.

CHAPTER XII.—McAlpin comes to Selwood with news that the vigilantes had been routed by Starbuck's crowd, and Doctor Carpy is wounded. Fearing for Christie's safety, Selwood, with his party, returns to Sleepy Cat. He is unable to find Christie, but rallies his teamsters for a fight with the crooks.

CHAPTER XIII.—Selwood makes his way by stealth to Starbuck's den with out being detected. Favored by the excitement in the headquarters of the outlaws he succeeds in "covering" Harry Barbanet, prominent among the crooks, and making him lead the way to a room where he believes Christie and other prisoners are confined.

CHAPTER XIV.—In the room Selwood finds Christie, her father, and Margaret Hyde. Selwood's teamsters arrive and a general battle commences. In a hand-to-hand fight Selwood takes Starbuck prisoner, the crooks are killed or captured and the den burned.

CHAPTER XV.—The missionary Selwood had been seeking, who had officiated at the wedding of his parents, is found. Margaret Hyde appeals to Selwood to spare Starbuck, declaring she is his wife and will take him away. For the woman's sake, Selwood frees Starbuck, and with Margaret, and "Big Haynes" as a guide, the outlaw leaves Sleepy Cat.

"But, John," she pleaded in heart-breaking tones, "if you won't say anything, I'm lost. None of these men would have any mercy for me; or for him but to hang him. They have no hearts, no feeling—you know. I might as well go out and beg the stones in the streets for mercy."

Selwood stood motionless. "He pulled a knife on me in that clench tonight," he muttered.

Her plea was so swift. "He was drinking tonight—"

"He dragged Christie Fyler out of this hotel down to that—" Words could convey no more of hateful, bitter anger than his words carried.

"He was drinking, John—drinking! And the others were going to burn the hotel—I was here, I know—and I went with her to protect her, John. I went with her! I'd have given up my life rather than she should come to harm. I thought of her. I thought of you—"

"My advice to you would be to let him hang."

She sprang up from her chair, and clasping one of her bony hands in the other, at the waist of her worn dress, stood, dry-eyed, before him. "John, listen! Have you never done things you wish you hadn't done?"

He snorted. "I hope they don't class me with that—"

"You know what whisky will do to a man—"

"For God's sake, don't blame his meanness on whisky—whisky's got enough to answer for!"

"I don't. I don't. I blame it on myself. When I should have told him that terrible night to do right, I told him to do wrong. Pity me! Have a little mercy for me, John. Think of the old padre whose picture you kept here on the wall so long—who has spent his life forgiving men, helping them. Oh, I'll pray that you find that padre, John. If he were here, he would ask you for the sake of Christ and His Mother to pity me tonight, to let Cliff go. Think of Christie, John. You love her, she loves you. Would you spare him if she asked you? I've told her all this. She's in my room now down the hall. She'll beg for his life of you this moment if you'll let her—she told me she would. She has forgiven him. Oh, God! Her words poured out in a torrent—low, tearless. She sank before him on her knees. "I'll do anything for you you could ask of a woman, John. I'll pray for you every day and night of my life. Have pity on me! Spare him to me for one more—just one more chance!"

"Spare Him to Me for One More—Just One More Chance!"

She had caught his bandaged hand in her thin, knotted fingers and covered it with her forehead. He stood irresolute, wanting to pull it away and ashamed to—uneasily listening and thinking. A long time he stood. Then, suddenly, his face darkened. He jerked himself angrily up.

"What do you want me to do?" He threw the words at her with a rude savageness that would have frightened another. But Margaret knew what his words meant. She scrambled to her feet and caught his hand again in her hands, and broke into a flood of tears. "Oh, I don't know. I don't know," she sobbed; then she lifted her streaming face with the tender confidence of a child. "You will know, John."

"Sit down," he snapped. She shrank away. From her chair she only looked her hope and her gratitude and watched anxiously the play of his features. Selwood with a vacant expression, took up from the table Scott's cigarette, put it between his lips, and slowly felt for a match.

"I'm doing something I don't approve of," he said sulkily. "Nobody else will approve of it, that's a cinch. This buck has tried his blindest to kill me—and done worse than that. Nobody outside a lunatic asylum would turn a hand to help him. If I wasn't a blamed fool, I wouldn't."

She bowed her head. "Ask Bob Scott," he went on, "to bring McAlpin in here—McAlpin is waiting for me down stairs. But if you want to save your man, don't let Paradise come in. When Scott and McAlpin come in here, stay outside the door till I send for you."

"Boys," he said to McAlpin and Scott the moment the door of his room closed behind them, "Meg, out there, is the wife of this bound Starbuck. You didn't know it; I didn't—nobody anywhere knew it. I can't tell you everything she told me tonight—if I stopped to, they'd hang Starbuck hanged before I got down there. And I can't tell you why I've promised her his life—but I've been just blamed fool enough to do it—that's all. And—"he spoke low and with stubborn intonation—"when I make a promise, I don't allow any man to interfere. To begin with, Starbuck is my own personal prisoner. I want to get him away without hurting some people's feelings—you can understand that. Will you help?"

"Well," he continued, as he listened to their protests of loyalty with an ungrudging assent, "I thought maybe you would. Now call in Meg."

Scott opened the door, and Margaret Hyde, looking questioningly from one to the other, as if to read her fate in their eyes, stepped inside, and the door was closed behind her. Selwood spoke again. "Starbuck and Big Haynes," he said to her, "are tied up and locked in the harness-room at the barn. Lefever's men are guarding them. I'll go down with you all and take care of Lefever. He'll call off his men and leave me to look after my prisoner. Bob, you cut Starbuck loose. McAlpin, you have horses saddled at the back door of the barn, and Bob will ride with Meg and—him to the east end of town. Nobody," he spoke now to Margaret Hyde, "will bother you beyond that. Keep out of the way of travelers and of our men, but not out of sight of you can. If you can get to Medicine Bend, you'll be all right—nobody there to bother. But between here and there you'll have to look out. Any of our boys or the Vigilantes will shoot him on sight. Leave the horses at Medicine Bend in our barn—Well, I guess that's all."

Under one pretext or another, Lefever, amenable to Selwood's plea for Meg Hyde, who, for Lefever, had never refused to take care of a sick teamster, got rid of the guards. It was more trouble for Lefever to dispose of the remainder of his fighting men, but on the strength of burning rumors, in the invention of which the wagon boss easily excelled, the men were sent on various but pressing wild goose chases, and Selwood's way was cleared.

He left Margaret in the office and took McAlpin well down the dark gangway, near one of the big out-bins. "Where have you got Haynes?" asked Selwood.

McAlpin shuffled about and scraped his feet. "John," he said apologetically, but speaking fast to skate over very thin ice, "it's this way. Haynes wasn't the worst of them devils—now, was he?"

The barn boss looked hopefully for a sign of assent from his listener, but Selwood was silent and emotionless. "It made me a harder to go on," McAlpin pushed ahead. "The teamsters was for stringing up everybody they ketched after this last fight down at Bartoo's. But I just stood 'em off on Haynes. He told me how come the bunk-house burned. Starbuck and Bartoo sent him to tell you that they wouldn't touch company property if you stayed neutral. But he couldn't find you and gave the word to Lefever, and Lefever said the teamsters would stay out of it. But some of the teamsters had grievances agin the gamblers, and went out with the Vigilantes, so Starbuck said that released 'em and they fired the bunk-house."

"Where is Haynes?" "Right here in this bin," explained McAlpin, pointing to the bin at their hand; "he's under the oats—tied up and all safe till you decide whether you'll let them dashed Vigilantes hang him—but he wasn't the worst of them devils, John, not by no manner o' means, at all."

"Get him out," directed Selwood, still non-committal.

McAlpin, handing his lantern to Selwood, sprang into the bin and began to paw down into the oats. In one corner he had left an armoire, cunningly contrived with empty sacks, and after digging at this corner, McAlpin uncovered Haynes, cut the ropes from his arms, and, digging out his feet, cut the ropes from his ankles.

"Ed—" began Selwood. Haynes interrupted him. "Don't say anything, John. I can't help the way things have gone. But I'll say this: I don't know no more'n a child unborn who fired the hall. Bull Page told me the Vigilantes were coming up the hill after me, so I had to light out."

"Well, whatever's coming to you, Ed, there's nothing coming tonight. You know this country 'tween here and Medicine Bend?"

"Backwards and forwards, John."

"Meg Hyde has begged Starbuck from me. It's not coming to him, but I've been fool enough to give in. If they can get to Medicine Bend they'll be safe. If one of the teamsters catches the sight of Starbuck he'll shoot him. They've got to get to the Bend by keeping off the big trail and sneaking through the canyons and behind the rocks. It's your chance, Ed. I've got nothing like hanging against you—not anything like it. McAlpin will have the horses at the back door, and you can do your best to make it with Starbuck and Meg Hyde. Hustle."

Leaving McAlpin to explain, Selwood walked rapidly back to the dimly, smelly office. Margaret Hyde was feverishly waiting. He directed her to go into the harness-room and apprise her husband, making only the request that Starbuck under no circumstances speak to him. After Margaret had gone in and come out again, he told her to go to the gangway door and wait, took the lantern from her hand, went into the room himself, and, bending over Starbuck, cut the ropes that bound him, steadied him on his cramped feet, unlocked the gangway door, threw it open, and pointed to Meg outside.

Starbuck, bleary-eyed and blood-crusted, his hair disheveled and his trousers and shirt awry, was a desperate sight. He gazed at Selwood standing with the lantern in one hand and Barbanet's gun in the other. Selwood silently handed him the gun.

Starbuck had been forbidden to speak. His lips were sealed. He tucked the gun into his trousers waistband, and took a step toward the door that meant freedom. Before the threshold he stopped, turned to Selwood and spoke.

"John," he said in a tone that surprised his listener, "I've been a —" He applied to himself the scurrilous epithet so commonly and freely used among frontier men. But Selwood heard it from the lips of one who meant now to condemn fittingly only his own shame, not his mother. "I've been one—I know it," he hurried on. "But if I can ever make it up to—Meg—and you—"

Selwood waved him on. "Never mind me," he said evenly. "Your chance lies ahead of you." He pointed to the door. "Take it."

OHIO MAN APPLAUDS EAST MICHIGAN AT BANQUET

The shortest-and, to many, most striking talk made at the annual meeting and banquet of the Tri-County Sportsmen association at Greenbush Inn, Greenbush, May 19, was delivered by W. C. Fridley, Lima, Ohio. Mr. Fridley talked precisely one-quarter of a minute.

Holding his hands a dish containing three beautiful brook trout, ranging in size from 12 inches to 15 inches, he said: "I caught these this afternoon in the Comstock. I have fished all over the country, in the

LINDBERGH ON WAY TO UNITED STATES

Hero of N. Y.-Paris Flight to Arrive in Washington on June 11.

Washington.—With definite assurances received that Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh, lone hero of the New York-Paris flight, will arrive at Washington navy yard at noon Saturday, June 11, preparations to give him a fitting welcome have been completed on a scale exceeding preparations for inaugural of Presidents.

The cruiser, Memphis, on which Captain Lindbergh will sail from Europe, will be accompanied to Washington from Hampton Roads by an aerial escort of more than fifty airplanes, led by the giant dirigible, Los Angeles, and also by naval vessels, a coast guard cruiser and scores of motor boats.

Captain Lindbergh will remain in Washington until Monday. Then he will fly to New York in the "Spirit of St. Louis" in which he made his remarkable flight across the Atlantic. From Washington to New York and New York to St. Louis, an escort of army and navy airplanes will accompany him.

On landing at the navy yard, Captain Lindbergh will be escorted down Pennsylvania avenue to the Washington monument grounds in a triumphal parade. In this parade army and navy, civil and fraternal organizations will participate and army, navy and marine bands will furnish music.

At the northwest corner of the Washington monument Captain Lindbergh will be formally received and welcomed home in behalf of the American people by President Coolidge. The President then will decorate him with the Distinguished Flying cross.

Friends of Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh in Washington, including the wives of many of the older representatives who were in congress during her husband's term of service in the lower house, joined with the President and Mrs. Coolidge in inviting her to come to the capital to participate in the "welcome home" to her son.

PARIS.—One last hectic day in Paris before he sailed for home was spent by Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh. From the moment he arrived at Le Bourget by air from Henley it was one mad round of receptions.

The only time Lindbergh had even partially to himself was a short period when he tried to handle affairs requiring his personal attention.

During his last day Lindbergh was notified that he had been awarded the Grand Gold Medal of the French Geographic society, dined in the Bois de Boulogne as the guest of several hundred of Europe's famous aviators at the headquarters of the International League of Aviators and was awarded the pilot star medal of the Lafayette Escadrille and honorary membership in that rank of fearless flyers.

He was given a stirring reception by Swedish residents of Paris at the Swedish church and then drove to visit the Lafayette memorial on the outskirts of Paris and the American hospital at Neuilly before returning to another crowded gala event in his honor at the Franciscan Amerique, where Marshals Lyautey and Joffre and many members of the French academy added their homage.

After he was introduced to the League of Aviators, Lindbergh again paid a tribute to the recent attempt of Nungesser and Gail as "probably the most daring flight ever made," and then added:

"Although I am leaving, it will be weeks and months before I would go if the choice were left entirely to me. When the first chance to get away presents itself I am looking forward to coming back to France."

Tremendous cheers greeted the promise. Then Dr. Edmund Gros, representing the Lafayette Escadrille, presented the medal worn only by veterans of the famous escadrille. Lindbergh was so deeply touched that he could only reply with great sincerity: "I want to say that this little pin here means more to me than probably any other thing I have received since I came to Europe."

London.—What city in the United States really can claim Lindbergh as its own hero? The flyer himself may have decided that point when he signed the visitors' book in the officers' mess at the Kenley aerodrome as follows: "Charles A. Lindbergh, St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A."

Nipigon, in Canada and everywhere. I find as good fishing as I want right here in East Michigan, in Alcona county."

Mr. Fridley is one of the most enthusiastic sportsmen supporters of East Michigan's recreational interests. Discussing the section later, he said: "I have been coming here for years. I presume I shall continue to come as long as I live. It is a great country, offering everything that anyone could possibly seek in the line of recreation, scenic beauty and outdoor life."

Have you ever made good on one job.. for 39 years?

THE extra mileage you get from Dunlop tires starts with the fact that Dunlop has had thirty-nine years of tire-building experience—more than any other tire-maker.

Each part of each Dunlop is built right. Dunlop owns its own cotton mills to spin selected long-fibre cotton into the special Dunlop cable-twist cords.

These cords mean extra strength—an added factor of safety against constant load and pounding of roads—longer life and greater mileage.

They mean extra "stretch"—so the tire carcass will give under blows, and come back to its original shape without the slightest injury.

Every Dunlop you buy has extra miles built into it because Dunlop knows each part of its job. That is why we recommend you put Dunlops on your car.

In connection with his work at this factory, he has signed a contract to play baseball with the Fisher body baseball club.

Jas. McNeven, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Ruth and the Misses Kathryn Brown and Evelyn Wood, met with an auto accident Sunday morning near Houghton Lake. Unknown to Mr. McNeven, one of his tires went flat, and the first thing he knew his car swerved in the road two or three times, and then headed for a fence on the other side of a narrow ditch. Luckily, none of the occupants were injured, but the car was badly damaged, the front axle being broken and radiator punctured. The party was enroute to Lansing to accompany Mrs. McNeven home, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Clare Smith.

Dr. R. E. Goslow, who has been in Detroit since the middle of April, having gone there at that time with intentions of locating there, has found the prospects good and so while in Grayling recently announced the giving up of his chiropractor practice in this vicinity. Dr. Goslow is very efficient in his line, but as the territory is limited he did not feel that he could afford to remain, although he enjoyed a good patronage. He is a very progressive young man and brimming over with ambition so that he is eager to get into larger fields. Dr. Goslow's leaving Grayling is a source of regret to many. He was very active in church and Sunday school work in the Michelson Memorial church, having been superintendent of the Sunday school, and taking much interest in the church as a whole. The past two seasons he successfully put over lyceum courses, spending much of his time drafting advertising schemes and other means to bring this matter before the public. This meant a great deal to the people of Grayling in general, who receive the benefits from these high class entertainments. Dr. Goslow has the best wishes of hosts of Grayling friends in his new location.

It is hoped that everyone of the ladies and gentlemen of Grayling will take this opportunity to meet and become acquainted with Rev. and Mrs. Greenwood, who have already become active in the community as well as the church.

Three of our prominent citizens will leave next Monday on a well-earned vacation for a pleasure trip into the Canadian Northwest. They are, George W. McCullough, of the McCullough & Matson barber shop, Charles O. McCullough, shoe repairer, and County Surveyor Edward S. Houghton. They will travel by auto and their destination is five hundred miles on the other side of Duluth, in the district of Kanora. They will be gone three weeks, and besides taking in the sights, will enjoy fishing, for which that region is famous. Charley says this will be his first real vacation in eight years and so his repair shop will be closed during his absence.

Collen's Inn has taken on a most attractive appearance this season and for beauty and comfort one will have to go a long ways to find any better. Manager George Collen has been busy for weeks remodeling, repainting and redecorating the interior of the building so that we doubt if there is a more attractive resort place in the north. The T-Shoppe is already for the opening date, with Mrs. Collens and Mrs. A. M. Lewis in charge. This was opened only last year, but the ladies had a most successful season, having catered to many beautiful affairs. Many improvements have been made in this department also. Leo E. Schram and his new Ramblers Orchestra have been engaged again this season to furnish music, and Manager Schram is busy making arrangements to have it better than ever. Next Wednesday night is the date of the opening party, and a large crowd is expected, as advertising has been distributed in all places surrounding Grayling. Let's boost our home resort and thus help it grow to be one of the most famous in the North.

DURO-STONE COMPANY BUILDS MARBLE FRONT

Evidences of the start of the Duro-Stone Co. to get to manufacturing in reality is born out by the installation of the new "Marble" front that is being installed for the City Restaurant.

This front has been extended to the walk line, and new plate glass windows now grace the place, adding a very pleasing appearance. Beneath the windows and on the outside corner are large slabs that are excellent imitations of genuine marble.

This is the first job of its kind the Duro-Stone Co. have ever put out, and it is attracting a lot of attention because of its beauty and also because of the durability it assures. The slabs are white with lines of black blending throughout.

The company is also putting out a line of lawn and yard ornaments that promise to create a large demand. Among the latter are bird baths. These stand about three or four feet in height with a thirty-inch bowl mounted upon a heavy pedestal. They are made in imitation of the various shades of domestic and imported marble and are extremely handsome. Also lawn urns in a number of shapes and of material like that used for the bird-baths.

These articles are only a beginning of a long list of things the Duro-Stone Co. intends to manufacture. While it may seem to be slow in getting started, yet the management and directors feel that it is better to go slowly and with confidence rather than to make any costly mistakes. The business seems to be built upon substantial lines and has prospect of becoming one of our best.

So very many have been doing five days work and scattering it over six days.

GRAND RAPIDS WALTONITES DENOUNCE SAVAGE

From Grand Rapids Press
The expected battle at the noon-day meeting of Dwight Lydell chapter of the Izak Walton league at the Elks temple Friday noon failed to develop, when the local chapter went unanimously on record as supporting the state conservation commission in the matter of revoking the fishing orders on the Pine, Pere Marquette and Ausable rivers.

It had been prophesied before the meeting that a heated discussion would follow the attempt of the local chapter to take a stand on the controversy which is at present rocking the state organization, and which began when H. A. Savage of Saginaw, recently elected state president, sent out a letter a few days ago in which he condemned the conservation commissions action, and urged all chapters to go on record as favoring a continuation of the bait fishing ban.

Meeting Is Peaceful
Friday's meeting was entirely given over to a discussion of the matter, but complete harmony reigned. Only two members could be found to defend the fly fishing order at all, and even they agreed that the matter had been settled by the conservation commission after due consideration, and that any criticism of the action taken was at this time untimely and out of place. The vote against supporting Savage's stand was unanimous.

It was pointed out that Savage had overstepped his position in this matter and members declared his attitude would do the league more harm in Michigan than anything that has ever happened in its history. A resolution was passed urging that such matters in the future be referred to the state executive committee before any action is taken.

Copies of the resolutions will be sent to all chapters in the state and to the conservation department.

Health News

(By the County Nurse)
The magnificent One hears it everywhere now, for school is nearly at an end and plans are being made for the summer. Everything has to have plan and order, even the time we have in which to do just as we please.

Vacations serve a two-fold purpose: to recover from the past year's hard work, and to prepare for the ensuing year's activities. For the school children this is a real job, though they are not aware of a vacation being anything but happy release from school so that they can play endlessly. Nevertheless, there is no denying that they are storing up strength and reserve energy for next year's hard study, and we must remember that each succeeding year of school requires more rigid study than the previous one.

What are the things that make a child ready for school? One of them is immunity to disease. There is no place earth where a child is as exposed to disease as the school. We have been so busy with the pro and con of toxin-antitoxin that we have become dangerously indifferent to small-pox vaccination.

It is hard to believe that not more than 150 years ago such sayings as, "Don't be vaccinated! It will make homes grow on your head and you'll look like a cow," were whispered from person to person throughout the civilized world. Together with other absurd notions the prevention of the immediate use of one of the greatest benefactors the human race has ever received was accomplished.

The simple statement of an obscure doctor, who had labored for years unnoticed, that he had conquered the worst scourge from which mankind had ever suffered, started an endless chain of discussions and agreements. It almost divided the world into two factions—the vaccinationists and the anti-vaccinationists. This seems almost unbelievable to-day, but it is a fact that the houses of the vaccinationists in Boston and elsewhere were besieged by mobs and dear old Cotton Mather, proponent of vaccination, was about as popular in Boston as a horse thief after the Civil War.

Since Jenner's time the history of small-pox has been the history of vaccination. Wherever vaccination has been practiced faithfully, small-pox has been relegated to a place of minor importance. Where it has been neglected, and people forgot both the danger of infection and the weapon against it that Edward Jenner gave the world, it has broken out to take its toll of human life and suffering.

Every few years the newspapers tell of a small-pox epidemic somewhere. Such an epidemic awakens people in the community affected. Vaccination is then faithfully practiced and the disease vanishes until carelessness again summons it to the forefront.

Health authorities tell us that it is not at all improbable that small-pox will begin to take gradually heavier tolls each year unless people mend the error of their ways. They back up their assertions with figures such as this: "There were nearly twice as many cases of small-pox in America during 1924 as there were during 1923, due to the increasing number of unvaccinated people."

You owe it to your children, your whole family and the community not to become careless about this. Have your children vaccinated this summer before school starts so that they are protected against this virulent, ugly disease. They have a right to good health just as they have a right to a good name.

MALNUTRITION IN GRAYLING

It would startle Grayling to find that 48 per cent of its children were seriously underweight, indicating malnutrition. Such a state of affairs is sometimes disclosed when a town believes itself a place of healthy people.

Not far from the Great Lakes, for instance, is a city where the authorities used to consider it a disgrace to have a school official become interested. After some persuasive work it was decided to weigh and measure the children just as an experiment. Such a startling disclosure of underweight occurred that physical examinations were next given to half the children. It was found that town suffered from malnutrition.

Is Grayling sure that malnutrition is not one of its problems? Even if it may not be thought that such is the case, make certain. Follow it up and find out. No town wants such a big percentage of its citizens handicapped. If the test cannot be made with the smaller children before they go to school, it can be done with those in the grade and high schools. Have them weighed, for example. Are they the average weight for their height and age? A girl seven years old who is forty inches tall should weigh about thirty-five pounds. If she weighs only thirty pounds, she should be about six inches taller. A boy of the same age forty-one inches in height should weigh about thirty-eight pounds, and when forty-four inches should also be about forty-four pounds. Every inch in height in childhood, in a very rough estimate, adds from two to four pounds in weight.

Tables of height and weight for age are easily obtainable both for children and adults. That's one of the criteria by which malnutrition may be judged. Anyone more than ten per cent underweight for height and age is growing up fairly well, and is not a case of malnutrition. It inevitably means lowered resistance to disease and probably faulty bone development, as well as defective teeth because the body is not obtaining the material it wants for growth and health.

Just by looking around you can also judge whether Grayling's children are well nourished. Have they strong, straight bones, healthy teeth that will last a lifetime, firm, well built muscles, a moderate amount of body fat that makes good padding, but is not "flabby"?

It is no reflection on the propriety of the town to say after making this investigation that there is mal-nourishment. A mother in a poor home may know the principles of nutrition and while feeding her children on the least expensive foods may yet give them the right diet so that they are splendid specimens. On the other hand, in a well-to-do home there are mothers who induce the boys and girls in the very things they should not have and malnutrition results. Often, the most poorly nourished children come from homes where there is no stint of money. They have tea, coffee, candies, sweet cakes, pickles, instead of the wholesome whole grain cereals, fruits and green vegetables.

How does Grayling come out in the tests for malnutrition?

JUST "OIL" WILL GET YOU INTO TROUBLE

(By Erwin Greer, President Greer College of Automotive & Electrical Trades, Chicago, Ill.)
If every car owner would keep his car supplied with the best oils and greases adapted to the motor, the motor of the car would never need arms taken up against them. Suppose we take a typical case of the pace that kills. You trot your splendid wagon out on its first few thousand miles, driving pretty carefully for the first thousand, so's not to get into any trouble. You are watching the oil gauge, and when it drops low, you run into a station and let 'em to shoot you a quart or two of oil.

"Light or medium?" asks the man in overalls.
"Oh, medium, I guess," you say, because "medium" sounds like a safe average. For the motor, the selection depends on the kind of oil the station you happen to pull up to happens to have.

After a while "3000" tumbles into place on the speedometer, and then, "grief!"
The rest of the story is short enough. A bit of synthetic muck stopped the motor of oil through the groove bearing went completely dry and gripped the wrist pin so tightly that it was torn loose, and the continued motion of the engine, gouging the loose pin against the cylinder wall like a cold chisel, soon scored the cylinder so badly that it had to be rebored, or at least patched by a patented process. To do this the motor had to be taken down, cleared and emptied and the block hauled to town, left a few days, brought back and reassembled; and the bill made out that let you off so easy. You can be glad you didn't get a strained or broken crankshaft along with the rest.

Funny, too, isn't it, if you come to think about it? You put six months' income into a car and bring it home for the family to admire. It's admirable, all right. It's more admirable than one man in a thousand ever stops to recall. It's the embodiment of every principal known to mechanics, from high tension to hydraulics; it's the work of the most modern and standardized perfection. With honest-to-goodness care, its normal life will run from fifty to a hundred thousand miles, and it may be much longer. But at 10,000 it has reached the dangerous years, and at 20,000 it is swiftly sinking into senile debility. You can't break the record and stay young—not without a painful lot of expensive overhauling, anyhow.

Know your oil and stick to the best brand.

SAVING OUR SCENERY

No one cares to visit a land that has been denuded of its forests and where in the places where healthy trees once stood, blackened stumps stand out against the sky. The scenic value of Michigan's forests cannot be over-estimated, not alone as to their lure to the tourist, but for their fascination for the home folks as well. Many persons who are now citizens of our state have been attracted here by our wonderful scenery. Should we destroy that scenery many would probably go elsewhere to make their homes. We are living in a day when people desire pleasant surroundings. Take two pieces of property with identical advantages except that one has trees and the other has not, and place them on the market. You will find that the one with the trees will not only sell quicker, but will bring more. Trees are worth money and now is the time for the citizens of Michigan to invest in them at little cost. A few dollars spent in planting trees today will bring you big returns twenty-five years from now. Michigan should save what scenery she has now and create more by planting trees.

BANKERS ALL SET FOR ROBBERIES

More vigilantes than would form a battalion and a half of infantry have already been enlisted in thirty-seven of the eighty-three counties of the state, to combat bank robbers according to the statement of Paul J. Ulrich, Mr. Clemens, chairman of the Bankers' state protective committee.

Over fifteen hundred men, especially selected for their fitness, have been divided into units of three men each and distributed over the counties at strategic points.

Although the standard equipment of these vigilantes, Mr. Ulrich stated, consists of a .38 Grag rifle, .45 caliber revolver and plenty of ammunition, many counties are supplementing this equipment with shot guns and riot guns.

"Unless we concede at the start," Chairman Ulrich said, "that a literal state of warfare at present exists between the bandit and the banker, we will not get very far in our plans."

"For this reason we are putting the vigilantes on a war footing as rapidly as possible. Rifle and pistol practice will be the rule within a very short time; former army officers are being selected to head up the county vigilante committees and an accurate survey of the country around each bank has been made."

"We have already organized a belt of vigilantes clean across the state and have surrounded all the larger cities with a network of armed men who will frustrate any effort of the bandits to seek refuge in the metropolises."

In Grand Rapids and Hastings we have stationed two airplanes manned by experienced pilots who will be able to fly at a moment's notice to any part of the state where a robbery is reported. These planes are equipped with machine guns and the pilots, flying low, will be able to halt any fleeing bandits as well as survey the obscure places where they might hide."

At the present time over forty thousand dollars in rewards have been posted over the state, according to Joseph Rylands, director of organization for the bankers.

The counties organized so far are offering these rewards to anyone who will tip off the vigilantes that a robbery is being planned, as well as to those who aid in capturing or killing them, Rylands said. "By offering the rewards for advance information about contemplated bank robberies, we will be able to form ambushes and veritable death traps to meet these yeggs when they arrive," Rylands stated.

MAKES NO GRAND-STAND PLAY AT EXPENSE OF FLOOD SUFFERERS

Despite the invitations of some well intentioned but unthinking friends, and of trap-laying enemies, the President refused to make a rare-show of the pitiful sufferings and privations in the flood area by visiting that territory. This again is one of the times that we can thank Providence that in Calvin Coolidge we have no self-advertising, publicity seeking tom-tom beating chief executive. This is the time to thank Providence that when a national emergency arises, the President picks men competent to handle the task, gives them every ounce of his support and encouragement, but trusts and demands that they do the work.

From a press agent's standpoint, a visit of the President to the Mississippi area could be made a world-beating publicity stunt. With the proper supply of movie cameras, he could be photographed on a hundred dikes and in a hundred different poses. He could be shown comforting the weak, personally directing the tolling workmen, and even making direct rescues of people from the flood. Once again let us rejoice that his genuine anxiety for the safety, comfort and solace of these people makes such postures absolutely abhorrent to him.

In his office at Washington almost hourly he has reports of each development. From his office at Washington he is able to authorize instantly the unlocking of the stores of the army and navy depots and the employment not only of the material and supplies, but of the necessary men. Already, under his hands a program for immediate relief has been organized, but equally important he has already started the development of a comprehensive flood control program which Congress will later be called upon to develop.

SHIPMENTS BEGUN ON NEW NASH 4-PASSENGER COUPE

Initial shipments of the new Nash 4-passenger coupe have begun by the Nash Motors Company to dealers throughout the country. While announcement of the new model was made two months ago, this is the first opportunity the public has had to view the car. Those who have seen it say the 4-passenger coupe is the most perfect specimen of Nash body craftsmanship ever presented to the public, and dealers report an unusually heavy demand. The coupe has a low forward-sweeping body, French-type back and roof, and a graceful nickel-mounted rear deck. The deep, broad driving seat has all the appearance and comfort of a luxurious daybed. It is upholstered in dark green mohair, tufted. The wide doors, side walls and head lining are trimmed to match.

The genuine walnut steering wheel with comfortable grip matches the in-laid walnut window panel, the crown panel of genuine walnut above the instrument board, and the walnut finished board.

The new coupe is beautifully lacquered in two shades of green.

A new note has been struck in the appearance and arrangement of the nickel bars which grace the rear deck. Instead of short bars of nickel, three long, handsome highly nickelled bars are used. Two of these are set lengthwise along each side of the deck and the third one crosswise, lending a decorative and substantial effect. At the rear of the car, opening on the curb side, is a large luggage compartment with ample space for carrying golf clubs, parcels and packages. The door is equipped with a strong lock and key. The rear window, looking out onto the rumble seat, may be lowered by the simple turn of an attractive silver-finished window lift. The windshield, too, opens forward by the turn of a regulator, placed within easy reach of the driver's hand. Silver finished hardware, in period design, is used throughout.
